

CORNELL UNIVERSITY

Founded in 1865 by Ezra Cornell and Andrew White, Cornell University is a world class Ivy-League institution of higher learning located in Ithaca, New York.

"I would found an institution where any person can find instruction in any study."

—Ezra Cornell

With 14 colleges and schools, 1,648 faculty members, and 45 Nobel laureate, Cornell seeks to make contributions in all fields of knowledge in a manner that prioritizes public engagement in an effort to improve the quality of life in New York, the nation, and the world.

ABOUT CICER

Cornell is an intellectual powerhouse with exceptional breadth and depth of research expertise on China's economy. Cornell Institute for Chinese Economic Research (CICER) is becoming a world-renowned hub for rigorous and impactful research on China's economy.

CICER organizes activities in the following three areas:

Research: bringing together top researchers from Cornell and around the globe to study vital economic and social issues in China using state-of-the-art economic tools and big data.

Policy Engagement: promoting empirically grounded policymaking by engaging in dialogue with government agencies, think tanks, and international organizations.

Education: providing opportunities for Cornell students to participate in research projects, hosting visiting scholars and graduate students, and offering training programs to college students, business leaders, and policy makers.

About CICER Summer Camp

CICER offers an annual Summer Camp on Economics and Business. The goal of the program is to help college students in China gain an in-depth understanding of the most important economic and business challenges facing China, the US and the world, as well as acquiring knowledge of the academic environment, culture and social background of the US.

The three-week program offers courses by prominent professors in business and economics, workshops on graduate school applications, seminars on the US job market and career choices, and extensive field trips to other Ivy-League universities, prominent think tanks, and international organizations in New York City and Washington DC. Students will have opportunities to interact with professionals in these organizations.

The program offers:

- Courses and seminars on economics and business by Cornell professors
- Academic seminars featuring professors from leading universities and institutions
- Workshops on graduate school applications and career development
- Field trips to New York City and Washington DC, as well as interaction with professionals
